By Appointment.

Transvaal Colony (until 1900 the South African or Boer Republic) is a Crown British Colony in South East Africa with an area of 120 000 square miles. Its natural resources are great, gold, tin and coal being the chief output. In the neighbourhood of rivers, the country is rich in pasture and grazing land, though elsewhere arid and bare of vegetation. Many wild animals of the deer tribe are found in profusion especially in the northern districts, while lions and other savage beasts are also found.
